THE SOCIAL WORLD

President and Mrs. Roosevelt's First Evening Levee.

THE WAINWRIGHT-FORAKER WEDDING

A Rear Admiral's Daughter Marries a Clergyman.

MISS COLLIER'S DEBUT

President and Mrs. Roosevelt's reception in honor of the diplomatic corps last night opened the ceremonious season at the White House and marked it by one of the most brilliant gatherings of distinguished men and women held there in many years. There were thousands of new faces in the throngs passing the receiving party which, in comparison with the personnel of the foreign circle seen en masse on New Year morning, made the special guests of the evening seem as familiar as old friends. Residential society, that sturdy plant which grows every year more and more important, was represented by its most influential members, who naturally enjoy closest and friendliest relations with the chief citizen of the capital city. No important members of the diplomatic corps were absent, and the procession as it filed past the receiving line made a spectacle of such color and glitter and such special interest as to person and career that no event of the win-ter can disturb its pre-eminence. The judicial, senatorial and other representatives of the official dignity of the nation added importance to each and every group into which accident or design bunched the guests. There were men, and women too, crossing one's path from the very threshold of the mansion to the furthermost corner of the east room whose names and achievements are history.

The irresistible charm of fair young girls and beautiful young matrons was in abundant evidence, while splendid jewels and rich gowns were perhaps never grouped more effectively. The Washington women who are the possessors of fine gems were arrayed in their bravest attire, but perhaps the most conspicuous among the elderly women whose display of flashing jewels was most extraordinary were from other cities and were looking on the scene with that delight in their eyes that only comes with the first glimpse.

As a suitable background the floral decoration of each room was very artistic. In the east room the east mantels were banked with roses. The center section was of liberty roses, a new deep-red specimen which has just emerged from the propagating gardens. Masses of white and corner parts of pink roses filled the rest of the broad mantel and made a mosaic on which every eye rested with pleasure.

When the receiving party came down the west staircase two buglers standing at the east room door heralded its approach. Col. Bingham and Commander Cowles walked in advance of the President and Mrs. Rooseadvance of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Secretary and Mrs. Root, the Attorney General and Mrs. Knox, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Hitchcock, Secretary Cortelyou and Miss Wilson followed. Miss Roosevelt, the Misses Hitchcock, Miss Knox and Miss Root made an interesting group at the end of the procession. Col. Bingham stood at the left and Maj. McCawley consists the President and his wife ley opposite the President and his wife during the reception. The President's cor-dial greeting and Mrs. Roosevelt's gracious acceptance of the pleasant words extended to her by each person make charming mem-ories of the reception to all participating. Mrs. Roosevelt was most elegantly gowned in white satin that had silver-spangled lace on the corsage and down the side of the skirt. A necklace of diamond stars was worn. She carried a bouquet of pink

Mrs. Root wore white satin and lace. with diamonds and pearls; Mrs. Knox, a dress of Irish point, a diamond necklace; Mrs. Smith, white chiffon, with lace inser-tions; Mrs. Hitchcock, white brocaded satin and diamonds, and Miss Wilson, light blue crepe, with white lace insertions.

Lord Pauncefote was happily able to head the diplomatic corps last night, and looked exceptionally well, despite his recent painful illness. Lady Pauncefote wore black velvet, the decollete bodice flashing with diamonds. The Misses Pauncefote accompanied their parents. The German, French, Russian, Mexican and Italian ambassadors were followed by their respective staffs. Mrs. Azpiroz, wife of the Mexican ambassador, was splendidly gowned in mauve satin and lace and wore many fine gems. Mrs. Perez, daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Perez, wore turquoise silk that had insertions of lace and a pearl necklace. The Gowns of the ladies with the diplomatic the uniforms and court costumes worn by wore a dress of palest blues and pinks last night, and a headdress glittering with gems. Her only concession to modern dress is her white gloves. Mme. de Margerie ac-companied her husband, the first secretary of the French embassy, and wore white satin and many jewels. Mrs. von Rebeur Paschwitz, wife of the military attache of the German embassy, was also in white.

Mrs. Cowles and Miss Roosevelt were among the first to go to the east room, and followed by hundreds of others, the pressure on the blue room was much relaxed.

Mrs. Cowles were white satin and many jewels, and a spray of green leaves in her hair. The President's daughter wore an empire dress of light blue satin and silver lace. Her brown hair was dressed low, and a large pink rose and foliage was caught a large pink rose and lollage was caught at the side of the coil.

After the presentation of the diplomatic corps, Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnston, once the presiding lady of the White House for her uncle, President Buchanan, passed along with her party. Following shortly were General and Mrs. Miles who received were General and Mrs. Miles, who, passing along to the east room, were there sur-rounded. Admiral and Mrs. Schley also as well as at other points where they lingered.

The presentation of cards of admission was generally regarded as a success. The small white envelopes in which they were inclosed were like snow on the front portico. An authority at the front door said there were probably 4,000 persons present. It was long past midnight when the last of the throng left the house and later still when the driveway was cleared of carriages. Fortunately the weather was so mild that the enforced waiting was no particular hardship. The wiser persons, however, had their carriages await them outside of the gates and were comfortably at home before those of the others could be summoned to the portico.

The marriage today at noon of Miss Julia Foraker, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Foraker, to Mr. Francis King Wainwright was witnessed by a family party. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Mackay-Smith and was followed by a large reception, at which about 400 guests were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright left on the afternoon train for a honeymoon junt afternoon train for a honeymoon jaunt. Their future home will be at Bryn Mawr, but until their new house there is com-pleted, the couple will live in Philadelphia. Flowers and music, added to the charms of a beautiful home, made the wedding scene a most interesting one. The ceremony took place in the ball room in front of the mantel. The bower was formed of easter lilies, against a background of palms and a hedge of green divided this suggestion of a chancel from the rest of the room. Garlands of asparagus over doorways etc. gave other festive touches doorways, etc., gave other festive touches both to this room and those adjoining. Out in the dining room holly wreaths and a Out in the dining room holly wreaths and a centerpiece of poinsetta blooms on the table brought back the holiday season, the hospitality of which was most apparent. An orchestra was stationed on the second balcony of the broad stairway, and played the wedding march as the bride, who was escorted by her father, approached the ball room. At the threshold she was met by the groom and his best man, Mr. Clement Reeves Wainwright. The couple had only received the congratulations of their relatives when the guests began to arrive for tives when the guests began to arrive for the reception. The bride of today is the younger of the three daughters of Senator and Mrs. For-aker, who have been so prominent in social life since coming here to live. She made her debut three years ago, and has been extremely popular. Her engagement was announced toward the close of last season, with that of her sister, who has since become Mrs. Randolph Matthews of Cincinnati. Her wedding dress was of heavy white satin, with yoke and sleeves of rose point. Her yell of tulle was held by ore not white satin, with yoke and sieeves of rose point. Her vell of tulle was held by orange blossoms. The jewels worn were gifts—a crescent of diamonds from her father and a dog collar of pearls, from the groom. Mrs. Foraker wore a Paris gown of white panne satin, brocaded with wisteria and trimmed with ecru lace and green leaves; diamond ornaments. Miss Foraker wore white lace; Mrs. Matthews white and black The bridal party and personal friends of The bridal party and personal friends of the couple, twenty in all, sat at table together for their wedding breakfast. The table was spread in an upstairs room and decorated with orchids, with corsage bouquets and boutonnieres of violets. With Mr. and Mrs. Wainwright were Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson Miss Forsker Miss Hales. Preston Gibson, Miss Foraker, Miss Helen Ffoulke, Miss Helen Bell, Miss Errol Brown and Miss Katherine Ward, Miss Burd Me-Lean, Miss Burd Thaw and Miss Painter of Pittsburg; Mr. Clement Walnwright, Mr. Howard Ellison and Mr. Burrows Sloan of Philadelphia; Mr. Slidell, Mr. Loose and Mr. Pilkin and Mr. Waggaman of this city.

Senatorial and diplomatic circles were largely represented in the guests attending the reception, as well as the resident families. The bride received a number of ele-gant gifts, which made a glittering collection, while being shown lately.

Mr. Wainwright, who is a Princeton graduate of 1899, is a member of the Ritten-house and Princeton Clubs in Philadelphia and the Merion Cricket Club.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt were among the first to offer congratulations to the newly married couple, and remained for quite a time.

Another most interesting occasion today at noon was the marriage of Miss Elise at noon was the marriage of Miss Elise Bradford, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Bradford, to Rev. Edward Darlington Johnson of Brunswick, Me. Bishop Satterlee performed the ceremony at St. Mark's Pro-Cathedral, which was selected because it was the scene a few years ago of Mr. Johnson's ordination.

Mr. Leighton Franklin of Philadelphia, Dr. Taylor B. Dixon, Mr. H. H. D. Sterrett and Mr. Daniel L. Hazard were the ushers. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Katherine Bradford, and Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander was best man. The bride was escorted by her father. Her wedding was escorted by her father. Her wedding gown was of white lace over white satin. A tulle veil was worn and a white prayer book, from which Bishop Satterlee read the service, was carried. Farewell, dear father, sweet thy rest.
Weary with years and worn with pain.
Farewell, till in some happy place
We shall behold thy face again.
'Tis ours to miss thee, all our years.
And tender memories of thee keep.
Thine in the Lord to rest. for so
He giveth His beloved sleep.
